PETROGLYPH EARRINGS, PIN/PENDANT

Walk down Petroglyph Beach 1 hour south of Galligaskins by air, at low tide, and you'll find 10,000 year old carvings in ancient stone. They tell the Tlingit story of creation. Tidal action is slowly eroding them...captured here in sterling silver earrings, pin and pendant patterned from these petroglyphs.

ALASKA SOAPS FROM MELTED SNOW

ALASKAN POTPOURRIS

"We originally drove down to North Pole (an Alaskan village south of our Salcha log cabin) for distilled water to make our Alaska soap. Then we realized — pristine Alaska snow lay heaped at our doorstep. It is so pure — we add Alaskan scents like wild blueberry, fireweed, and tundra rose."

EACH TELLS A STORY

After the Great Flood, Raven was gorging himself on edibles on the beach. Hearing some strange sounds, he found a giant clamshell with little beings wiggling inside. He crooned and coaxed them out, and they were the first humans.

Near Cordova, Alaska's powerful Copper River roars over a delta to the Pacific Ocean. Only the strongest, most determined salmon challenge these icy, glacier-fed waters. Ultra-rich omega-3 fatty acids protect them from the frigid waters during their 300 mile journey to the headwaters. Their firm texture, deep orange color, and unmatched flavor are legendary worldwide.

ALASKA FRUIT TEAS

For over 20 years, we've harvested herbs and plants outside Fairbanks: rose leafs, raspberry leaves, chamomile, blueberry leaves, fireweed, rose hips, plantain (a good skin herb), spruce cones. All harvested wild, not cultivated.
